dit Bull. dell' inst. 1876 p. 150. Prodiit item in actis Giorn. degli scavi N. S. 3 (1875) p. 176.

Lucius hic notus est coactor L. Caecilius Iucundus, cuius nomen prodiderunt et parie-tariae domus inscriptiones et amphorarum ibi
reptarum et maxime tabellae auctionariae. — Praeterea conferendus est locus Petronii c. 30, ubi triclinium Trimaichionis describit: *in postibus triclinii fasces erant cum securibus fixi, quorum imam partem quasi embolum navis
aeneum (?) finiebat, in quo erat scriptum: C·
N·SEVIRO · AVGVSTALI · CINNAMVS · DISPENSATOR.*
Quod in libris ante seviro est Pompeio Trimalchioni delevi.

Beneath a bronze herm with letters once the colour of cinnabar. In Pompeii in the atrium of the house of L. Caecilius Iucundus (reg. V ins. 1) there once were two herms placed on either side of the tablinum, of which one, found in the original place, now is at the museum of Naples, but the other was removed in a recent theft.

I revised after Mau, who recorded it and published it Bull. dell' inst. 1876 p. 150. It appears also in Giorn. degli scavi N. S. 3 (1875) p. 176.

This Lucius is the well-known banker L. Caecilius Iucundus, whose name is found both in wall inscriptions on the house, on amphorae found there and predominantly on auction tables [sic]. – Further, one should compare a paragraph in Petronius, ch. 30, where he describes Trimalchio's triclinium: on the door posts of the triclinium were placed fasces with axes, whose lower part ended in like a ship's beak of bronze, on which were written: C N SEVIRO AVGVSTALI CINNAMVS DISPENSATOR [To C. N. sevir augustalis from the steward Cinnamus]. I deleted "to Pompeius Trimalchio", that is written in the books before seviro.

Translation: To the genius of our Lucius. Felix freedman [set this up].

Descripsimus. — Edidi Bull. Inst. 1876 p. 233; Viola Scavi 1873—78
p. 60 n. 37. — Est versus Homericum initium.

4078–4092 in the south part of the house, that is entered through no. 26.

Sogliano Pitt. Mur. 233; it is at a distance of 3 m from the floor.

ΚΑΙ ΜΙΝ ΦΩΝΗ 0,04

We recorded. – I published it Bull. Inst. 1876 p. 233; Viola Scavi 1873 – 78 p. 60 no. 37.

– It is the beginning of a line from Homer.

Translation and commentary: καί μιν φωνήσας ἔπεα πτερόεντα προσηύδα, and (s)he spoke to him/her with winged words, is an often recurring phrase in Homer.

Room k

IV 4079

IV 4091

V 1,26 o, east wall

4091 in exedrae, quae est ad sin. peristylīi, pariete dextro, prope ingressum, in tectorio olim minio picto, litteris subtilibus.

Descriptimus. — Edidi Bull. Inst. 1876 p. 233; Viola Scavi 1873–78 p. 56 n. 19. Niccolini III, casa di Cecilio Giocondo p. 3. Buecheler Anth. n. 945.

In the exedra to the left of the peristyle, on the right wall, close to the entrance, on plaster once painted with cinnabar, with very thin lines.

quis amat valeat pereat qui nescit amare bis tanto pereat
quisquis amare vetat

We recorded. – I published Bull. Inst. 1876 p. 233; Viola Scavi 1873–78, p. 56 no. 19. Niccolini III, casa di Cecilio Giocondo p. 3. Buecheler Anth. [= CLE] no. 945.

Translation: may the one who loves prosper; let the one who cannot love perish; let the one who veto love perish twice over.

Commentary: the expression quisquis amat, followed by valeat or pereat or other wishes is quite common in Pompeii. This is the only instance of this version.

IV 4092

V 1,26 o, east wall

On the same wall, on light yellow plaster.

Nero quis n

We recorded.
